Price City has worked hard for several years to bring this important project to fruition. The City coordinated partnerships with Carbon County and was a key sponsor for the Price River Enhancement Committee. It has been an effort to make improvements to the Price River to meet habitat and water quality goals established by the State of Utah as well as enhancing the non-motorized transportation and recreation options within the City.

The Trail became an integral element to provide improved public access, education, and a significant improvement to the pedestrian and bicycle facilities within the City. Price City, with the assistance of Jones & DeMille Engineering, worked to secure federal funding through UDOT and obtained the local match monies from the Community Impact Fund Board (CIB), Price City and Carbon County. The City worked diligently to ensure that the public, adjacent property owners, elementary school and business entities were fully aware of the project early on.

Jones & DeMille Engineering completed the environmental clearances, trail design, coordination with UDOT and FHWA to resolve right-of-way concerns along US Highway 6, and construction management services. Nielson Construction built the trail and the associated bridges, under-bridge crossing at 100 North, pedestrian ramps, fencing and other trail elements.

The trail was paved in November 2011 and will be a tremendous benefit to local users and visitors alike. Price City appreciates the broad support and hopes that everyone takes ownership in the Trail to maintain and preserve it for many decades to come.
